

Script Writing Ideas

Content Angles & Script Ideas for Short-Form Video (TikTok / Reels / Shorts)

1. "Reverse-Engineered Nostalgia" / The Liminal Pop Analysis

- The Concept: A video essay dissecting the haunting, nostalgic undertones in forgotten pop culture and vintage tracks, analyzing why certain chord progressions, visual palettes, and retro music videos evoke a feeling of "grief for a time you never lived in."
- Script Hook (0–3s): "There is a reason this specific song makes you miss a life you never had."
- Visual Style: Analog VHS textures, warm grain, slow-motion archival clips, and minimal modern typography.
- Format: YouTube Mini-Essay (4–6 mins) or high-retention TikTok Carousel.

Micro-Histories of Hidden Symbolism"

- The Concept: Unpack bizarre, forgotten superstitions, dream folklore, or artistic motifs across different centuries (e.g., why ancient cultures viewed spiders as weavers of fate rather than pests, or the psychology behind recurring nightmares).
- Script Hook (0–3s): "If you dream of webs, your subconscious isn't scared—it's trying to trap something."
- Visual Style: Quick cuts of classical Renaissance art, old manuscripts, moody lighting, and clean graphic overlays.
- Format: 45-second fast-paced educational Shorts

The "Deconstructed Sensory" Drink / Food Aesthetic

- The Concept: Move away from standard recipes and treat food/drink prep like an art installation or a sensory laboratory.
- The Idea: Document the preparation of traditional or niche drinks (like spiced cascara/coffee husk infusions, herbal brews, or infused syrups) using macro camera lenses, zero talking, and hyper-crisp raw audio

- (the sound of dried husks rattling, boiling water hitting spices, steam rising in natural sunlight).
- Script / Audio: No voiceover. Let text on screen tell a minimalist cultural story or poetic micro-fiction line with every step.
- Format: TikTok / Reels (15–30s ASMR)

Gaming

CHAPTER 4 – THE ISOLATION PROTOCOL

SETTING: Int. Aslan's Laboratory. Night. Dim fluorescent strips flicker over chemical racks, gene-sequencing monitors, and heavy quarantine glass.

[CINEMATIC CUTSCENE]

CAMERA: Low angle, tracking PLAYER entering the lab.

ASLAN (18) stands at the primary terminal, wearing his high-collared tunic and thick leather gloves. His back is turned. He does not turn around when the steel door slides open.

ASLAN

(quiet, dry)

Step back three paces. You're tracking outside particulate into the sterile zone.

PLAYER

(approaching)

We need to talk about the frontline, Aslan.

Aslan turns slightly. His shallow grey eyes look over the rim of his glasses, cold and analytical ASLAN If you're here to ask for another combat siphon, the answer is negative. My cellular tolerance is at twelve percent. Any further borrowing of trauma results in permanent organ necrosis.

[GAMEPLAY INTERACTION: DIALOGUE TREE]

The camera transitions behind the PLAYER's shoulder. A prompt appears on screen:

[OPTION A] "I don't care about the stats. We need your power."

ASLAN: (flatly) "Then prepare to carry a corpse back from the field. I am a scientist, not your infinite battery." (Affinity Decreases -10)

[OPTION B] "I'm not asking you to fight. I'm checking on you."

ASLAN: (pauses, adjusts his glove uncomfortably) "A statistically pointless inquiry. My vitals are functional. That is all that matters." (Affinity Increases +10)

[OPTION C - INVESTIGATE] "What are all these blood samples for?"

ASLAN: "Gene isolation. Looking for anomalies that shouldn't exist. Leave them alone." (Unlocks Quest Clue: 'The Recessive Sequence')

Writing/ Novels

The Epistolary Format Built on Digital & Physical Artifacts

- The Concept: Tell the story entirely through non-traditional media rather than standard chapters.
- The Execution: Mix handwritten margin notes in second-hand textbooks, deleted audio memo transcripts, laboratory charts, unsent letters, and flight itineraries between two distant cities.
- Why It Works: The reader acts like an investigator piecing together the characters' emotional arcs, secrets, and fractures through the physical evidence they leave behind.

2. The Reverse-Chronology Emotional Arc

- The Concept: Start the novel at the final moment, the quiet aftermath of a total separation, a sudden disappearance, or an erased identity and move backwards chapter by chapter.
- The Execution: Chapter 1 is the cold, definitive ending. The story then peels back the layers of misunderstandings, micro-decisions, late-night conversations, and the initial spark that set the entire collapse into motion.
- Why It Works: The suspense shifts from "What happens next?" to "How did two people who cared this much end up here?"

3. "Anatomical / Sensory" Metaphorical Realism

- The Concept: A grounded, literary fiction piece where a character's internal psychology is described strictly through biological, atmospheric, and physical sensations rather than basic feelings.
- The Execution: Instead of stating a character is heartbroken or detached, the prose focuses on the exact weight of silence in a room, the physical chill of a ceramic cup losing heat, or the phantom sensation of a barrier keeping the rest of the world at an untouchable distance.

4. The Dual-Perspective "Subjective Truth" Narrative

- The Concept: Two characters experience the exact same series of events, but each chapter alternates between their perspectives, showing how memory, fear, and personal perception completely warp reality.
- The Execution: One character views an interaction as an act of cold rejection; the other experienced the exact same moment as an act of desperate self-preservation. Neither is lying, their internal survival mechanisms simply translated the same truth into two opposite stories.